

HER LAST SONG

Music: Schau

Lyrics: Schau

The last song she ever liked
Came out a long time ago
But now she's gotten so old
The radio don't play it no more

But even though she forgets the simplest of things
She still remembers that song and she still sings

She married kind of late
And her husbands already long gone
They never got kids
So the song is like a child of it's own

She don't remember his face, and she's lost her wedding ring
No one ever visits, so no one ever hears her sing

But she sings

There will never be
Another you and me
There will never be
Another we

She's not afraid of dying
Everything she loved is gone
Her only left connection to life
A forgotten song

She gets through christmas, but she doesn't get to spring
As she dies, so does the song, the last time she sings

There will never be
Another you and me
There will never be
Another we
